

A BANANA HOUND SCULPTED FROM LIFE CONVINCING

Proves That the Rare
Dog Exists.

DOG THAT DIGGS CLAMS.

Australian Sausage Terrier Works in a Large Frankfurter Factory.

These are the dog days. Not the ordinary calendar dog days, but the days of the rare canine specimens.

Entrants for the bench show of the Vegetarian Dog Owners' Association continue to pour in. Mr. J. Henry Puffer is in a delirium of delight.

"It's going to be the biggest success with a big 'B,'" he said today. "Not-ley, N. J., is no place to hold such a show, and we have determined to use Madison Square Garden when we can get it. They have been unable to give us a date yet, but the date cannot be far off. The people are demanding the show. Applications for space are coming in every day and the inquiry for tickets is large. It is simply wonderful the interest that is being manifested.
When we started the show first the association intended to limit it to the exhibits of the members, but we have been so overrun with demands for space that we just have to bring it off in the Garden."

No more gratifying proof of the banana hound's existence has reached The Evening World since the controversy started than that sent to-day by Paul Hersel, the animal painter and sculptor, who has taken the trouble to model Roger, his genuine Peruvian banana hound, for Evening World readers to gaze on. This and the specimen which is being exhibited daily by Prof. Fellows of Barnum & Bailey's College ought to convince the most skeptical. Sculptor Hersel's letter follows:

EVIDENCE OF THE EXISTENCE OF THE BANANA HOUND.

To the Editor of The Evening World:
In order that the many doubting Thomas who have been casting aspersions on the banana hound may be effectually silenced I send you herewith a photograph of Roger, my genuine Peruvian banana hound.
And that the existence of the animal may be further discounted I ask you to notice particularly that the photo is of a sculpture which I made of Roger while crying for his favorite food. I could just as well have sent you a photo of the dog, but that might be doubted, as photographs can be faked, but no question can surely be made of a sculpture. It is absolutely impossible, as every artist knows, to make a figure like the one I send you without a true-to-life model, such as Roger is. It was done in Peru one balmy evening that I came on Roger crying aloud from hunger. The artistic impulse made me model him in red clay before I approached and asked him why he cried. When he told me that a storm had blown all the bananas away, leaving him helpless, I fed him some from my supply and he followed me willingly. He is now looked up in

CLAM DIGGING DOG HANDY TO HAVE.

To the Editor of The Evening World:
New York, April 1.
Being very much interested in the articles which are appearing regarding rare and peculiar specimens of the canine race, I beg to submit the following:

A friend of mine, Mr. C. F.
Cavanaugh of Long Branch, is the possessor of an Irish Clam Terrier.
This is one of the oldest breeds of dogs known, and many years ago was quite common on the west coast of Ireland, especially Galway and Mayo. It was a favorite dog of the ancient Druids and skeletons of the places of worship of these ancient Celts. This dog, as its name implies, subsists entirely on clams and other shell fish. It is very expert in procuring its food, nature having endowed it with peculiar forepaws which are armed with regulation clam hooks. These it uses in the same manner as clam-diggers, with an overhand motion. He is also very intelligent and of a kind and affectionate disposition. Whenever Mr.
C. or any of his family feel like enjoying some clam chowder they simply take the dog down to the beach and Tim—that's the dog's name—gets busy and soon has a fine mess of clams piled up on the shore.

SAUSAGE TERRIERS FINE DOGS FOR LABOR.

To the Editor of The Evening World: I have read with a great deal of interest your recent items covering the subject of curious dogs and the deplorable lack of public knowledge regarding some of them.

To any one who has lived in the tropics or worked on a banana boat the "banana hound" ceases to be a curiosity; it becomes an industrial necessity.
But to my mind one of the most valuable and quaint species of unusual canine is the "Australian sausage terrier." This name may be taken by frivolous minded persons to indicate that this dog is made into sausages, but sausage not the case.
It is used in the manufacture of frankfurters, but not as an ingredient unless by accident. These valuable little canines are scarcely ever more than six inches in length and shaped like a panetola or a narrow dachshund. They are used in the factories for measuring sausages, which they do by bringing their hind feet up to their front legs, then move their front feet forward the length of their body, then bring their hind feet forward again, very much like an inch worm. This operation is repeated with incredible rapidity and it is a common sight in a large sausage establishment to see whole rows of these little animals working with the speed and accuracy of machines measuring sausages. I have no doubt the term "hot dogs" as applied to frankfurters originated in this way.

The dogs are gentle and timid and are not suitable for pets owing to their peculiar mode of locomotion.
So far as I know this knowledge has never before been divulged to the general public, as up to this time it has been kept a trade secret, but as I leave the frankfurter business forever on April 1 I am willing to give this knowledge to help you in enlightening your readers.

lyn.

WEALTHY OLD MAN FOUND DEAD BY HIS LODGER.

Zimmerman Did All Work of His Lodging House Himself, Saying Women Wanted to Marry Him.

Moses Zimmerman, a wealthy and eccentric lodging house keeper, was found dead in his home, No. 114 East Tenth street, last night by Miss Bron-ner, a lodger. Apparently he was stricken with heart disease while sleeping. The body was sent to the Morgue and the house placed in charge of the Public Administrator.

Zimmerman, according to the police and the neighbors, owned the twenty-room lodging house which he ran and other parts of the city, a farm in New Jersey and a pineapple plantation in the West Indies. Mrs. Zimmerman died seven years ago.

Since that time the old man had done all the work in his lodging house without any help, declaring hired women were a nuisance, and, like all the widows in the neighborhood, wanted to marry him for his money.

Miss Bronner told the police that Zimmerman had been twice married, his first wife having divorced him. He had told her of a niece in Germany.

ELEPHANTS, MONKEYS, TIGERS AND 340 SNAKES ARRIVE HERE ON LINER

President Grant Also Brings 2,300 Immigrants, Almost Breaking Record.

The population of our fair land—human, animal, bird, snake and bug—was largely increased to-day by the arrival from Hamburg of the big Hamburg-American liner President Grant, carrying 2,300 immigrants, scores of wild and tame beasts, birds and reptiles, and everything that travels with such a cargo. The quota of immigrants carried by the President Grant is almost a record for the ship, and appears to forecast the descent upon the United States of a vast horde of aliens during the coming spring and summer.

The President Grant was thirteen days on the trip from Hamburg, and passed through one storm after another. All the animals and nearly all the immigrants were seasick most of the time, and the aggregate of misery aboard the President Grant was something awful.

Among the passengers on the liner were three baby elephants, two cages of bears, three cages of panthers and tigers, two cages of monkeys, two storks, one zebra, 340 assorted snakes, eight kana-roos, two civet cats, fifty cages of assorted birds, 50 pheasants, one capybara, one laughing hyena and one schweebak from Java. The latter animal is strange to the ship news naturalists. It is believed to be some kind of the famous banana hound.

POLICEMAN HIT BY TAXI.

Fallon Has Leg Broken, but Witnesses Exonerate Chauffeur.

Policeman John Fallon was on his way to his home, No. 3517 Avenue J, Flatbush, after being relieved from duty early to-day, when he was struck by a taxicab at Flatbush avenue. He was taken to the Beren street station and then sent to the Holy Family Hospital, suffering from a fractured leg and contusions of the body. Witnesses said Lawrence Gilmart, the chauffeur of the taxicab, was not at fault, and he was allowed to go.

HIS 65-YEAR-OLD WIFE TRACKS HUSBAND, 25, RUNAWAY FROM FARM

Traces Up-to-Date City Girl and Gets Back $1,500 Note, but Wants Her Auto.

A stout woman of sixty-five, evidently a stranger to the ways of New York, popped out of a shadow at the intersection of Ralph avenue and Sumpter street, Brooklyn, at 11 o'clock last night and pounced on a muscular man about twenty-five years old.

The young man yelled, broke away and started to run, but the portly woman was quicker than he and soon again had him by the collar.

"This youngster is my husband, and he ran away from me down in Maryland," announced the captor, while the captive ineffectually writhed under her firm grip. "He decamped with my automobile and a note for $1,000 because the sight of a pretty young city woman ad-dled his head."

The crowd which had collected saw the young man give up the note and make a quick departure.

At the Ralph avenue station she told the lieutenant on duty that she was Mrs.
Dora Bernhard of Easton, Md., and that her husband was August G. Bernhard.
"My troubles are these," she said. "A dozen years ago this boy, then thirteen, came to work on my farm of 150 acres and practically grew up on it. I was a widow and glad to have him about for he took an interest in making the place pay. After a while I agreed to give him $100 a year and did for seven years.

"Five years ago August came to me one day and said I could save that $100 if I agreed to a plan he had in mind.
He said this was to marry him. Well, $100 is $100, and I agreed. Besides, I liked him and thought he would take an even greater interest. And he did until the pretty city girl showed up. Then his interest began to wane."

Mrs. Bernhard went on to tell more about the pretty girl, but she made it plain that she had no complaint to make against her. The young woman, she said, was Miss Helen Reader, niece of Mrs. Mary Reader of No. 86 Sumpter street, Brooklyn. Both were friends of hers.

Last fall, according to Mrs. Bernhard, the Readers came to Easton to make a long delayed visit, and it wasn't long before she began to notice that her young husband cast longing eyes upon the prettily gowned young woman, whose ways were different from those of the girls of Talbot County.

"I figured that August would head for the city, where he knew pretty girls live, and that I might locate him not far from the home of Helen. So when I got here I decided to camp out near the Reader house without saying anything to anybody that I had got to town. I was rewarded all right, for I got the note back, but I need that car."

Planes for Louis Hopkins.

BERLIN, April 2.—Berlin's police president, having failed to persuade the women to avoid pointed hats or to provide protectors for them, now announced that after April 15 offenders against the ordinance will be fined up to $15 for each offense, and if they do not pay they will be imprisoned.
